Across the Delaware River, in Southern New Jersey, the situation is reported to be grave. Dr. Davis, president of the Camden Board of Health, estimates there are 5,000 individual cases in that city. He declares the epidemic has not yet reached its height. Emergency hospitals are being established and the leading women of the city have gone into them and are doing the menial work in addition to nursing the sick. In Gloucester, near Camden, 400 new cases developed since yesterday.

BOSTON, Oct. 7.—Reports from district health officers received at the State House to-day showed no increase of influenza cases in any part of Massachusetts. Boston and many other cities and towns have closed all saloons, soda fountains, pool and oilliard parlors, bowling alleys, auction rooms and other places of public gathering, in addition to theatres and schools. The total number of new cases re-orted to the State Board of Health in the forty-eight hours ending at noon to-day was 5,476; there were 378 deaths.

WASHINGTON. Oct. 7.—Because of the Spanish influenza epidemic in Washington, all galleries of Congress, except the press galleries, were closed to-day, and all visitors, except lawyers were barred from the Supreme Court. Even the President's galleries in the House and Senate were closed. Revision of the war revenue bill by the Senate Finance Committee was stopped, because Simmons, of North Carolina, chairman, was fighting off a severe cold. He has not developed influenza, but it was thought wise to postpone to-day's meeting.

Dora winked and hiccoughed convivially, and was led reluctantly to a bed of clean straw. There Joe left her. Presently he was called from his duties by impatient roars from the lion house, such as usually arise only at the approach of feeding time.

Visitors, especially children, used to bring in bottles of milk, which Dora gulped with infantile lip smackings. When it came to feeding time for the rest of the animals Dora would trot ahead of the keepers on their rounds, and came to be recognized by every animal in the place, from Mrs. Murphy, the genial hippopotamus, to the timest monkey, as the harbinger of dinner.
